

Pediatricians' intention to recommend Human Papillomavirus (HPV) vaccines to 11- to 12-year-old girls post-licensing

Date:

Oct 2008

Visit Article

We surveyed 105 pediatric clinicians following Human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccine licensure to identify factors associated with intention to recommend the vaccine to 11- to 12-year-old girls. Pediatricians who were early adopters of medical technologies had fewer concerns about HPV vaccine safety/efficacy, and who anticipated parental vaccine safety/efficacy concerns reported higher intention to recommend the vaccine.

Journal:

Journal of Adolescent Health

Authors:

Feemster KA, Winters SE, Fiks AG, Kinsman S, Kahn JA

Topics

Sexual & Reproductive Health