Join Us for a Virtual Conversation: Centering Youth in Supporting Access to Comprehensive Reproductive and Sexual Health Services

Date:

Thursday, November 03, 2022

Growing rates of sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and limited access to comprehensive reproductive health care in many states highlight the need to better support our teens with research, programming and policies that address their full spectrum of sexual and reproductive health care needs.

In order to effectively respond to their needs, it's critical for us to consider adolescents' perspectives about their health and how research, programs and policy can contribute to solutions. What opportunities exist to meaningfully engage adolescents to understand needs, develop and implement responses, and support related policymaking processes?

Join us on November 17 at 12 p.m. ET for "Centering Youth in Supporting Access to Comprehensive Reproductive and Sexual Health Services," a virtual conversation with pediatricians, researchers, and experts in HIV care, STI testing, and contraception, who will discuss how research can include youth perspectives in understanding their reproductive and sexual health needs and support access to services, as well as how policy can address gaps in care.

Panelists:

- Bianca Allison, MD, MPH, assistant professor in the Division of General Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine, Department of Pediatrics at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine
- Aisha Mays, MD, clinical researcher at the Bixby Center for Global Reproductive Health at the University of California, San Francisco, and medical director of the Dream Youth Clinic at the Roots Community Health Center
