

Intergenerational Family Services in Pediatrics

Date:

May 2016

Download Material

Intergenerational family services are services provided to parents, caregivers and their children in pediatric health care settings. This family-centered approach recognizes that children's health is directly connected to the physical, mental and social well-being of their caregivers. Although intergenerational health is not a new concept, recent health care reforms and emerging research offer new opportunities to put family-centered care into practice. Services for caregivers such as physical and mental health treatment, vaccinations, obesity prevention and smoking cessation are critical to the promotion of child and family health. Similarly, social determinants of health, such as poverty and housing insecurity, are linked to long-term health outcomes for children and are therefore an essential part of intergenerational programs.

Authors:

Wilson CL, Matone M, Eder J, Rubin D

Related Content

Chronic Disease Prevalence and Discontinuation of Medications Among Young Mothers with a Relationship to the Child Welfare System

Clinical Decision Support Tool for Parental Tobacco Treatment in Primary Care

A behavioral economics intervention to increase pertussis vaccination among infant caregivers: A randomized feasibility trial

Mental Health Services for Children and Caregivers Remaining at Home after Suspected Maltreatment